Dear Commissioner Suehs:

On behalf of the Texas Council for Developmental Disabilities (TCDD), I want to thank you for your continued commitment regarding the importance of obtaining input from individuals with disabilities and their families on public policy decisions. Since my last correspondence, further discussion and consideration has been given to the TCDD practice of reimbursing public members for their travel costs to participate as members of various advisory bodies that provide input to the Commission. In accordance with TCDD policy, Council Chair Brenda Coleman-Beattie has authorized continued TCDD funding for these travel costs through FY 2012-2013. She will advise the TCDD Executive Committee and Council of that decision at our upcoming meetings in early August.

TCDD is well aware that the state's fiscal outlook has changed considerably over the last few months. In recognition of the current fiscal challenges and the anticipated impact on services for people with disabilities, TCDD believes it is imperative that advocacy by and for people with disabilities is supported at this time. Further, as we continue to work with HHSC staff that provide coordination for these advisory bodies, we realize that some of the information necessary to support an appropriations request at this time may not be readily available. Therefore, we ask that HHSC defer the request for legislative authority for these travel expenses until at least the following session.

TCDD previously approved funding to support travel costs of individuals with developmental disabilities and their family members on various advisory bodies to HHSC for the current biennium (FY 2010-11). Although my previous correspondence was not intended to suggest that TCDD has made any decision concerning funding of this activity beyond that time, we understand that HHSC may have understood that to be the intent. Therefore, Council Chair Coleman-Beattie has authorized TCDD funding to continue for these travel costs for the FY 2012-13 biennium, within available resources. During the interim period (i.e., the next two years), TCDD will work with HHSC staff and the administrative agent for these funds to more fully and accurately ascertain the cost for each of the advisory bodies to support the development of information that will facilitate our prospective discussions about this matter.

Again, thanks for your commitment and that of HHSC staff regarding the importance of obtaining input from individuals with disabilities and their families on public policy decisions. The Council looks forward to continuing its work with HHSC on this matter and welcomes your thoughts, suggestions, or questions.

Sincerely,
